A SKETCH OF ARTHUR SEWALL

Mr Sewall's Plain Words About Free Coinage.

Arthur Sewall of Bath, Me., the Democratic nominee for vice president, is better known as a man of business than as a politician, although for many years past he has taken prominent part in the councils of the Democratic party. He is a type of the New England business and social magnate as fleveloped in the rough, hard working communities

The elder Sewall was a shipbuilder in Bath, Me., in the early years of the century, and his son Arthur succeeded

They are an old and illustrious family, coming to this country from Coventry, England, in 1634.

In the colonial times the Sewalls were prominent in public affairs always. Dummer Sewall, grandfather of the present Arthur, went to Maine in 1762 and purchased the tract of land whereon now stand the Sewall homes and ship-

William D. Sewall, a son of Dum-mer, was the first shipwright of the family, beginning with his first ship in 1823. He always built for himself, and, as a rule, besides continuing to own the vessels, some member of the family captained them until the number became too numerous for the family to supply

In the 73 years since they began they have turned out 7 brigs, 67 full rigged ships, 17 schooners, 4 barks—all wooden -and in the last few years have turned their attention to steel vessels, of which the Dirigo was the first.

The family had no small fame at one time as being the owners and builders of the largest vessels affoat.

Arthur Sewall was born Nov. 25. 1885. He was educated in the public schools of his native city and entered his father's shipyard as an apprentice. In the course of time he and his brother Edward succeeded to the business. They formed the firm of E. & A. Sewall. This was in the year 1854. When Edward Sewall died, in 1879, the firm name became A. Sewall & Co.

A Fortune Well Won. By successful management of his various shipping interests Mr. Sewall has amassed a considerable fortune. He is a man of sterling integrity and general worth and has always held a high place socially in the community in which he has lived from childhood. Mr. Sewall served in the city government as alderman two years. He was director of the Maine Central railroad, and early in the eighties became its president. In 1883 he became president of the Eastern road and continued in that office until after its consolidation with the Boston and Maine, when he was made a director in the latter company. In 1888 he was chosen a member of the national Democratic committee.

In 1872 he was present at the Democratic national convention in Cincinnati and saw Horace Greeley nominated. In 1880 he was a delegate at large from Maine to the national Democratic convention at St. Louis, and in 1884 was present at the Democratic national convention that nominated Cleveland, and a delegate at large to the St. Louis convention in 1892. Although Bath has always been hopelessly Republican, Mr.

Personally Mr. Sewall is strong, courageous, competent and well balanced mentally and physically. To use the common phrase, he carries his age well. He is a splendid example of physical manhood, has a soldierly bearing and is what might be termed a fine looking man. Although his hair and mustache are of age have scarcely made their appearance upon his face, and he looks ten years younger than he really is. He has strong, massive features; full, penetrating eyes, and a large, stalwart figure, that seems as solid as a wall of rock. He is highly esteemed by his neighbors, who say of him that he is an ideal citizen and a firm friend. In 1859 Mr. Sewall married Emily Duncan Crooker, daughter of a prominent citizen of Bath. Three children were born to them-Harold M. Sewall, former consul general to Samoa; William D. Sewall, a junior member of the shipbuilding firm, and Dummer Sewall, who died in infancy. Harold Sewall was sent to Samoa at the time of the Samoan outbreak by President Cleve-

Sewall's Republican Son. The political course of Harold M. Sewall has been somewhat peculiar. From an active and enthusiastic Democrat he has become a rampant Lepub-lican. This change of front was said to have been a result of what he considered the party's failure in administration. Young Sewall was one of the leaders of the Reed delegation at St. Louis and is one of the leaders of the Young Re-publican movement in Maine. His name will always be mentioned in con-nection with the late history of Samon. He was born in Bath in 1860. Having been fitted for college in the public schools of his native town, he entered Harvard university in 1878.

In 1882 he graduated with high honors and immediately thereafter entered the Harvard law school, where he completed the full three years' course and received the degree of Ld. B. In March, 1887, he became consul general at Apia, Samoa. In that parition be-came into national prominence. The affairs in Samoa at that time were very complicated. Germany wanted to exercise a protectorate over the islands, which would have resulted in her annexing the best of them. England and the United States wanted a native gov-line, and her camera has caught for her hits of scenery is almost every corner of the land. She is an expert amateur photographer and has received diplomas for her work in Paris, New York and Bos-

When the news of her husband's nomination for the vice presidency was brought to her by her son, Harold M. Sewall, it was a surprise that was not altogether pleasing, for since the retire-ment of Mr. Sewall from the presidency of the Maine Central railroad she had indulged the hope that he would retire from the activities which had crowded his busy and successful life and enjoy the comfort of his beautiful Washington street home in the society of their children, who reside close by.

The wife of Mrs. Sewall's sen, Har old M., was Miss Camilla Loyall Ashe of San Francisco, daughter of Richard Ashe, who won honors in the Mexican war. She is the niece of Admiral Farragut, for whom the grandchild of Arthur Sewall was named.

The other daughter-in-law is Mrs. William D. Sewall, who was Miss Mary Summer of Worcester, Mass,

The wife of the vice presidential nomince is a woman of rare mental attainments. She is possessed of an artistic temperament and great ability as a painter, to which a large collection of water colors and landscape photographs made by her on two continents bears witness.

Mrs. Sewall was educated at a then famous fitting school in Ipswich and afterward traveled in England, remaining abroad for a considerable time. Gifted with the power of observation and with the ability to recognize the interesting, her reminiscences of European life are charming whenever they are called up in the companionship of her intimate friends. Though her health has not been good

Bayard requested his resignation on the | ships in the face of what other builders have considered disaster. During the on Samoan affairs did not agree with first administration of Cleveland grass grew in every wooden shipbuilding yard on both coasts. But during the last few years of the eighties Mr. Sewall, believing that a turn for the better had or soon would come, resumed building, and with greater earnestness than ever There followed in quick succession four monsters, each representing a sum beyond $125,000. These were the Rappahannock, Shenandoah, Susquehanna and Roanoke, all wooden vessels, averaging about 2,000 tons net each, capable of carrying easily a tonnage in cargo of half as much more. Of these vessels the Rappaharmock was destroyed by fire from spontaneous combustion in the South Pacific ocean some years ago.

The other three are still afloat, making the long voyages, and one or another is frequently seen in the East river. The Roanoke is the largest. This ship, built in 1892, and with New York as her hailing port, measures 3, 400 tons. The Shenandoah measures 3,258 and the Susquehanna 2,629. All are magnificent vessels, and as a fleet are classed superior to any other similar fleet under one control in the world. The last ship constructed by Mr. Sewall is the Dirigo. This vessel was launched two years ago and measures 2,856 tons. She is built of steel and is the first steel sailing ship built in America. To show in what proportion the business of the Sewall family has grown in comparison with the growth of other large businesses of the country, it may be stated that the tonuage of the Indiana, launched in 1876, is 1,488, while that of the Roan oke, launched 16 years later, is 3,400, nearly 214 times as great. In addition to his large fleet of square rigged deep water ships, Mr. Sewall has ecustructed and manages a large fleet of three and four masted schooners. which are engaged in the coal, ice and lumber trade on the Atlantic coast. One of these vessels, the Carrie A. Lane, a three masted schooner of less than $00 tons, was sent some years ago around Cape Horn from New York to San Francisco. She was the first vessel of anything like her kind or size to make this voyage.

His Faith In Our Merchant Marine Though little given to exploiting his opinions, Mr. Sewall can always be aroused to enthusiasm on his favorite topic of the future of America's mer-

He said in 1894: "We will yet build as many steel ships as we have wooden ones if congress will only continue to keep out foreign ships from competition in our own trade with those built on this side. I would like to see all our ships continued to be treated as well as we have our coastwise traffle, in which case we are sure to have at no distant day the finest merchant marine affont. only reason that we have any large ships affeat today is because the New York and San Francisco trade comes within the definition of coastwise traffic. There is a great surplus tonnage affoat, it is true, but with that it simply comes to a question of the survival of the fistest, and we could be counted upon to take far more than our share.

Americans can ecopete with for worm at shipbuilding in wood today. We are rapidly nearing the point where we can do so in the case of steel and iron ships. Under the law that was in force when I built the Dirigo, I brought her plates and bars from the other side duty free and spent all the money for labor in Bath, employing about 200 men for sev-

Mr. Sewall's views on the silver ques tion are most pronounced, and it is said that he utterly repudiates the allegation that he is a recent convert to the free coinage theory, but claims, on the contrary, that he was one of the pioneers of the movement in M ne.

Mr. Sewall's many r with men is plain speken and dire t. He possesses few of the graces of the orator, but he looks into the eyes of loose to whom he addresses himself and the matter as well as the method of f is speech is sincere and convincing. An excellent example of the simplicity of his language and his fidelity to the principles of his party can be found in his words when told of his nomination for the vice pres-

"I am an intense silver man. I be-lieve in the principle thoroughly. I am not second to our leader in my advocacy of free silver. I have had heartfelt convictions on the subject for a long time. It is the relief that the people demand, and the Democratic party is the party to give it to them. The Democratic party is the party of the many and not of the few.

"I indorse every word of the plat-form, but my whole life and soul are wrapped up in the free coinage of silver policy there expressed. It is the only remedy of the prevailing distress. I want to see the legislation of 1873 repealed. That is the height of my ambi-

Causes of Headache.

The ordinary headache which is so extremely common among the inhabitants of our Atlantic seaboard towns is the outcome of conditions effecting the nerves through impoverished blood containing poisonous matter absorbed from badly-digested food. So called liver torpidity and the catarrhal affections due to our changeable climate also aid in effecting its spread. Nervous exhaustion, due to irregular and fast living, plays an important part in its causation. Nervous strain, especially the eyes, and inflamed tiesue about the internal bones of the nose are special causes. Nerve Precinct Conventions Will Be Held August irritation, which is but poorly understood by the general reader, is a prolific cause of so-called nervous healache. I know of no more dangerous practice than to treat headache pain blindly with drugs. Of course, outdoor exercise is the best possible thing for permanent cure. It is very easy to relieve most forms of headache by means of coal-tar derivatives, of which so many are in the drug market. They form the basis of the many headache cures found on the druggists' shelves. Their use is not entirely without danger, for they are powerful heart depressants if taken in doses of any considerable siz .. - Dr. Cyrus Edson in the August Ladies Home Journal.

The Demands of Society.

Society demands that you should look well. Not that you should be a beauty, but that you should, on occasion, put on your best bile and tucker and help make up the picture that, all in all, constitutes society. You speak of the social world as selfish; so it is, for it demands from all its votaries absolute unselfishness. You must learn to have no illfeeling toward anybody. If a chatterbox tells you that Madame Malice has made you the suljet of her ridicule you must make yourself smile; go forward and meet Madame Malice with a pleasent word, a courteous bow, and you must entirely forget that she ras ever said anything but that which was pleasant.
